Eddie's Trainer Recruitment Guide

Getting Beta Testers for CMPD Fitness App · Based on Hunter Dickinson's sales principles

---

The Offer

Lifetime free access to the CMPD Fitness app in exchange for:

- Using it with their clients for ~1 month
- Giving honest feedback on bugs and improvements
- Potentially providing a testimonial if they love it

Target: 3-6 trainers to start

Who to Target

Ideal profiles:

- Small to medium fitness creators (1K-50K followers)
- Personal trainers or online coaches
- Already posting workout content
- Have clients they train (not just fitness influencers)
- Australian preferred (but not required)

Signs they're a good fit:

- Posts about client transformations
- Mentions online coaching in bio
- Uses other fitness apps (shows they're tech-open)
- Engages with their audience

Avoid: Huge influencers, people who only post gym selfies (no clients), those locked into competitor apps.

The 5 Principles (Hunter Dickinson)

1. Compliment First — Start with genuine appreciation for their content.
"Your transformation posts are sick. That client progress is legit."

2. Give Before You Ask — Lead with what you're offering (free lifetime access).
"We're giving lifetime access to a few trainers to test it out."

3. Peer Group Selling — Make them feel part of an exclusive early group.
"We're only taking 3-6 trainers for this first round."

4. Make Them Feel Special — Explain why you reached out to THEM.
"Saw your content and thought you'd be perfect for this."

5. No Pressure Positioning — It's free, no commitment.
"No pressure at all — just seeing if you'd be keen to test it."

What You're Offering

The app does:

- Programs with workouts, sets, reps, rest timers
- Clients can log their weights and track progress
- Calendar view of scheduled workouts
- Trainer dashboard to manage multiple clients

What's in it for them:

- Free tool to manage clients professionally
- Input on features (we'll actually build what they need)
- Early adopter status ("founding trainer")

The Conversation Framework

1. Open with a Genuine Compliment

> "Hey man, been seeing your content. That client transformation you posted last week was insane."

2. Find Out About Their Setup

> "Quick question — what do you use to send programs to your clients?"

Listen for pain points: Google Sheets, Excel/PDFs, expensive apps, nothing.

3. Plant the Seed

> "So my mate's been building this fitness app for trainers — lets you send programs, clients log their weights, track progress. He's looking for a few trainers to test it out. Lifetime free access in exchange for using it with some clients and giving feedback."

4. Make It Exclusive

> "Only taking like 3-6 trainers for this first round. Thought of you because your content's legit and you actually train real clients."

5. The Ask (No Pressure)

> "No pressure at all — just seeing if you'd be keen to check it out? Can send you a link to have a look."

Handling Responses

"Yeah sounds interesting"
→ "Sweet, it's app.cmpdcollective.com — sign up as a trainer and have a play. Let me know what you think."

"What's the catch?"
→ "No catch. It's new, so we need real trainers to use it and tell us what's missing. You get free lifetime access, we get feedback. Win-win."

"I already use [competitor]"
→ "Yeah fair. This one's still early but might be worth a look — especially if you're paying for the other one. This is free forever for early testers."

"I don't have many clients"
→ "All good, even just testing with one or two would be heaps helpful."

"Not interested"
→ "No worries at all man. Keep killing it with the content."

Follow-Up Schedule

Situation	Wait	Action
Sent link, no response	3 days	"Did you get a chance to check the app out?"
Still nothing	7 days	"All good if you're busy. Offer's there if you want it."
After that	—	Move on.

After They Sign Up

1. Welcome: "Sick, you're in! Have a play around, add a client or two."
2. Check in (1 week): "How's the app going? Any bugs or stuff that's confusing?"
3. Collect feedback: Write down everything — bugs, feature requests, confusion points.
4. After ~1 month: "Would you be open to giving us a quick testimonial?"

Key Messages

- Lifetime free access — real value, not a trial
- Only 3-6 spots — exclusive, not mass outreach
- We actually listen — their feedback shapes the app
- No pressure — they can say no
- Made for real trainers — not generic fitness app

What NOT to Do

- ❌ Don't spam — quality over quantity
- ❌ Don't oversell — it's free, let that speak
- ❌ Don't be pushy — you're offering value
- ❌ Don't follow up more than twice
- ❌ Don't promise features that don't exist
- ❌ Don't target huge influencers

Example Flow

You: Hey man, been seeing your content. That client transformation you posted was insane. How long you been coaching?

Them: Thanks bro! About 2 years now

You: Sick. Quick one — what do you use to send programs to your clients?

Them: Honestly just Google Sheets lol

You: Yeah I feel that. So my mate's been building this app for trainers — you create programs, clients log their weights, track progress.

     He's looking for a few trainers to test it.
     Lifetime free access if you're keen.

Them: What's the catch?

You: No catch. It's new so we need real trainers to tell us what's good and what's missing.
     Only taking like 5 people for this round.

Them: Yeah I'd check it out

You: Sweet it's app.cmpdcollective.com — sign up as a trainer. Let me know what you reckon.

Goal: Get 3-6 quality trainers who will actually use it and give real feedback.
